

application process

The first step for a non-profit organisation, community group or individual wishing to obtain design services Architects for Peace (arch-peace) involves sending a completed organisation and project profile to Architects for Peace pro-bono for consideration. The profile form is the second page of this document.

You will be contacted within two weeks of sending your completed profile form so that a time can be arranged for an interview and a site visit (if applicable). In this interview your project requirements and brief will be discussed to enable an arch-peace pro-bono representative to review the project and determine the nature and extent of design assistance required.

Following this meeting your application will be presented by the arch-peace pro-bono representative to the arch-peace pro-bono panel for approval. Should your application prove successful a project agreement letter will be sent; if your application is unsuccessful, arch-peace will endeavour to advise you of other options to consider in seeking appropriate alternative design services for your project. Once signed by both parties an arch-peace project team suitable for your design requirements will be appointed.

The application process is outlined in the flow chart below:

criteria for considering applications for assistance

When arch-peace receive applications for assistance, the application will be considered against the following criteria:

- Will the project help arch-peace achieve its vision?
- Is arch-peace able to provide the necessary skills, expertise and resources?
- Will the proposed project benefit the community served by the applicant?
- Whilst arch-peace is primarily focused on offering services to community organisations, individuals may also be considered on a case-by-case basis.
- Both the Client and the proposed project operate on a not-for-profit basis
- The Client has a clear understanding of the scope of the project and a demonstrated ability to fund the proposed project (or a clear plan of how funding will be secured)
- The Client is not currently receiving fee-based architectural services and/or does not have an existing relationship with an architect or architectural firm.
